

The Frankfurt School of Finance & Management is one of Europe's leading business schools. We invite applications for a faculty position as

Visiting Assistant Professor of Operations Management October 2018 – March 2019

Prerequisite for the position is a Ph.D. in Operations Management, Management Science, Operations Research, or related field. We look for excellent communication skills, and evidence of teaching effectiveness. German language skills are not required. We offer a stimulating research environment and all the opportunities of a vibrant private business school. For further information, please see www.frankfurt-school.de/en.

The Frankfurt School offers a state-of-the-art campus and stimulating research environment, with attractive research funding and all the opportunities of a vibrant private business school. Our proximity to one of the centres of European finance offers additional opportunities for collaboration with commercial partners.

Teaching duties are several sections of a second-year undergraduate course in "Operations Management". Teaching is concentrated in an intensive block of about seven weeks between late October and mid-December. Afterwards, the incumbent will have to grade exams with the help of teaching assistants.

The deadline for applications is 5 September 2018. Please submit your application including a CV, contact information for at least two references, three papers (published or unpublished), and a record of teaching effectiveness (taught courses and evaluations) by email to Frankfurt School Human Resources at personal@fs.de.

For inquiries about the position, please contact Dr. Matthias Catón, Programme Director for the Bachelor of Science programme, by email: m.caton@fs.de.

The Frankfurt School of Finance & Management values diversity and seeks talented students, faculty, and staff from diverse backgrounds. The Frankfurt School is an equal opportunities employer.
